Brussel, 6-8th June 2012

FAMILIES AT RISK AND SOCIAL PROTECTION

Dott. sa Silvana Tiani Brunelli

Relationship skills in the family

The abilities to have positive interactions can be improved.

Families at risk

One source of risk is located in relational problems.

From problems to a risk condition

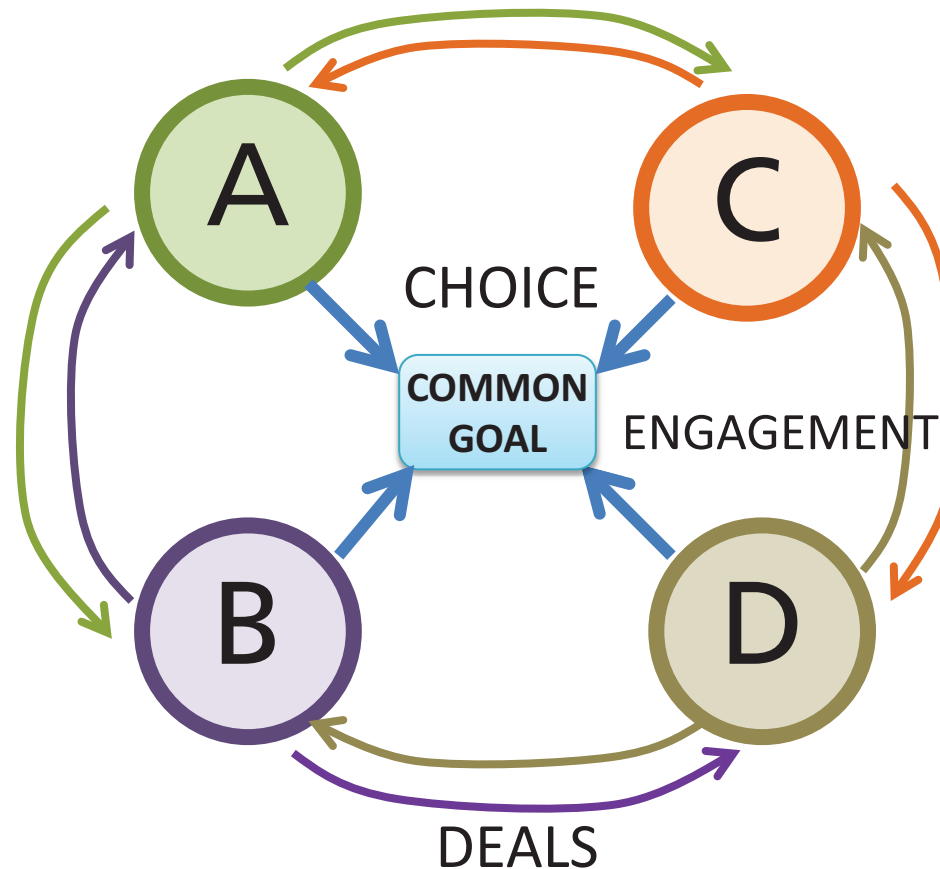

Bed relations cause isolation, solitude, lack of help and leads to a risk condition.

More abilities in relationships

A new approach to face the social protection:
improve the relational abilities that fortify the family
and sustain the other life projects.

Cooperation

Ability to cooperate: have a common goal, make deals, do our best, achieve a common goal.

Relationship skills in the family

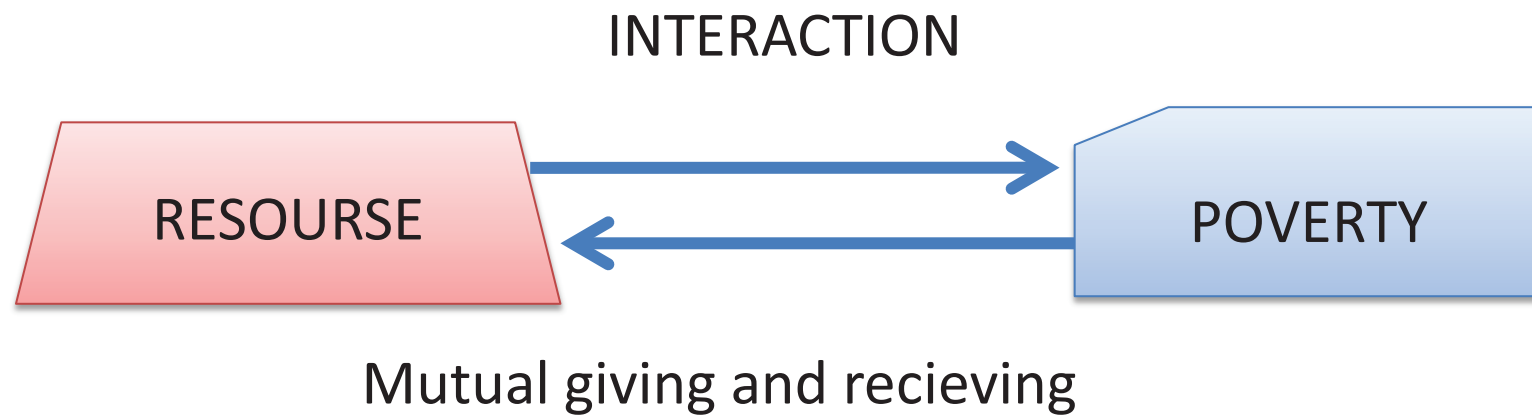

Personal skills allow us to satisfy the needs, carry out projects and create a lifestyle suited to the family. They make a family strong and stable.

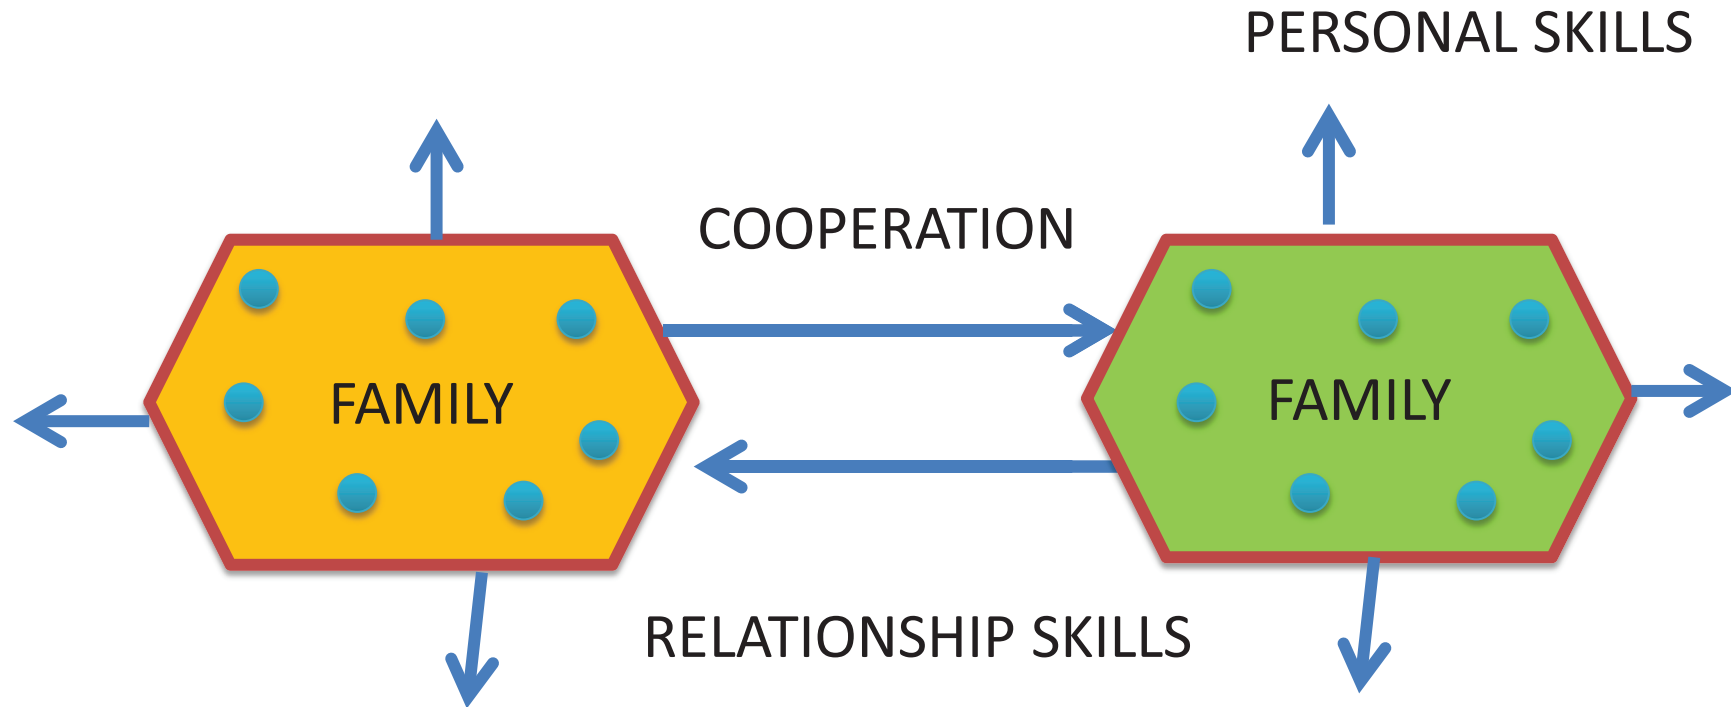

Traditional approach to social protection

An innovative approach to social protection

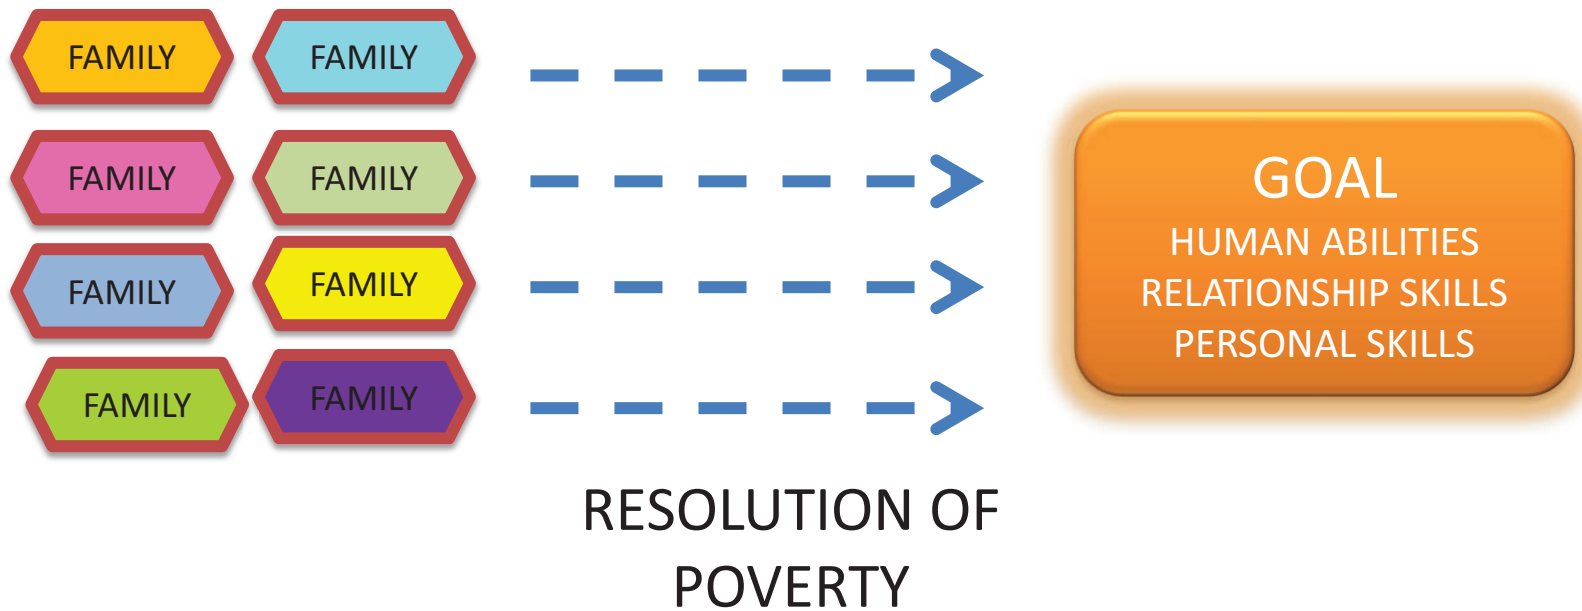

Cooperation can solve the problems

Turning problems into projects

Projects for the families

Recomandations

1. Promoting innovation in human abilities in the family as the direction for emancipation and for personal and social progress.
2. Improve personal skills and relationship skills in families, schools and in society as an engine of growth and problems resolution.
3. Design projects for all the citizens in which it is possible to pursue new goals, to address problems and to originate a joint action for their prevention.
4. Reinforce the value of a married life and family stability, to be conquered and maintained thanks to the personal maturity: understanding, collaboration, planning and a healthy sexual life.
5. Innovating the quality of education from a human perspective: reduce the use of painful stimuli, increase personal skills, increase learning through understanding and firmness and improve relations.
